MR. BINGHAM.

U.S. NAVAL BUILDING PROGRAMME

No Need For Concern, Says Envoy.

UNDERSTANDING WITH BRITISH PEOPLE

London, To-day. A reassuring statement on the threat of a naval building race was read by Mr. R. W. Bingham, United States Ambassador to Britain, when speaking at the Thanksgiving Day dinner of the American Society in London yesterday.

Dealing with the United States naval building activity, he expressed an opinion that there was not the slightest cause for uneasiness in connection with these naval programmes if only the British and the American peoples, each realising their own situation, realised each other's.

"In the anxious world the greatest cause for thanksgiving is the fact that the great democracies of the British Commonwealth and the United States seek only peace, with no hostility towards, or designs upon, any other nation," he declared.—Reuter.

NO EXCHANGE FUND IN AMERICA.

Mr. Bingham Puzzles Washington.

LONDON SATIRE AT DEPRECIATION.

Washington, To-day. Mr. R. W. Bingham's statement at the Thanksgiving Day dinner of the American Society in London, that an Exchange Equalisation Fund existed in America, had puzzled officials here, who interpret it as a reference to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's $500,000,000 account for the purchase of newly-mined gold.

They declare that it is the only fund remotely resembling the British fund, but it is so dissimilar in both size and object that it can hardly bear comparison. The London Financial Times declares that Mr. Bingham's statement that American fund worked satisfactorily does not seem to be borne out by events, "unless the fund is given a wrong name and meant to be an Exchange Depreciation Fund."—Reuter.

BRITISH DESTROYERS FOR AUSTRALIA

H.M.S. Stuart, Flotilla Leader, and H.M. Destroyers Vampire, Waterhen, Vendetta and Voyager, which have been commissioned for service with the Royal Australian Navy, arrived at Singapore on November 28 from Colombo, and left for Port Darwin yesterday, state the local Naval authorities.

CARING FOR JOBLESS

BRITAIN IMPROVES SYSTEM

Better Financing And More Benefits.

NEW UNEMPLOYMENT BILL PRESENTED

London, To-day. The new Employment Bill was the most important Government measure in the first part of the present session which was debated in the House of Commons yesterday.

It makes drastic amendments in the previous Unemployment Insurance Acts, establishes the solvency of the Insurance Fund provides outside unemployment insurance for assisting and promoting the welfare of able-bodied persons, and extends the period of benefit.

Clauses dealing with young persons reduce the minimum age of entry into insurance to school-leaving age and increase the membership of Junior Instructional Centres, while other clauses set up Assistance Boards and Advisory Committees, to determine the persons to whom and the circumstances in which allowances may be granted from the unemployment assistance fund.

In moving the second reading, the Minister of Labour, Sir Henry Betterton, described the Bill as one of most comprehensive pieces of social legislation introduced for over a generation.

It represented, he said, the logical development of the policy pursued by every party in Great Britain during the last 30 years. It was significant that people in other countries who had previously derided the British system were now, in their bewilderment and perplexity, hastily improvising an imitation of it.

The present Bill was based on the fundamental principle that on the one hand there should be a contributory insurance scheme covering as much of the field as possible, and on the other hand an outside body assuming general responsibility for the relief of the able-bodied unemployed.

The broad principles on which the insurance part of the Bill was based were: Firstly, that the scheme should be financed by contributions from employers, workers and the State.

BRITISH MINISTER LEAVING CHINA.

Farewell To Marshal Chiang Kai-shek.

Peking, To-day.

Sir Miles Lampson, the retiring British Minister to China, will fly to Nanchang on Monday to bid farewell to Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, and from Nanchang will fly to Shanghai via Nanking.—Central News Agency.

COMMUNISTS IN PEKING.

Over 100 Arrested.

Peking, To-day.

At least 100 persons suspected of being concerned in Communist activities have been rounded up by the Peking authorities in the last few days.

Most of them have been convicted, and more important ones will be sent to Nanking for further trial.—Central News Agency.

STIFF PRISON SENTENCES FOR GERMAN COMMUNISTS

Sequel To Attack On Nazi Tavern In Hamburg

Hamburg, To-day. Sentences ranging from 15 to nine years' hard labour were passed yesterday on seven Communists for participating in an attack on a Nazi tavern, in which the owner was slightly injured. Sixteen other Communists received smaller sentences.—Reuter.

DUBLIN RAID ON "BLUE SHIRTS"

Documents And Arms Seized.

YOUNG IRELAND PARTY IS "REVOLUTIONARY"

Dublin, To-day. The Irish Free State police yesterday raided the residences of General O'Duffy, leader of the "Blue Shirts," and Mr. Ernest Blythe, former Minister of Finance, and also offices of the Farmers' and Ratepayers' League and the headquarters of the "Blue Shirts." Numerous documents were seized.

The matter was raised in the Dail in the evening. The Minister for Local Government, Mr. Patrick J. Rutledge, declared that the documents seized during the raids proved conclusively that the aims of the Young Ireland Organisation were revolutionary, and added that arms and ammunition were also seized.

He asserted that the "Blue Shirts" despite the ban, were continuing work without any change in their objects and tactics.—Reuter.

SINGLE DEFENCE ESTIMATE?

Co-Ordination Of Three Fighting Services.

MR. MACDONALD EVADES DIRECT QUESTION

London, To-day. The Prime Minister, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, was asked in the House of Commons yesterday whether any Government or other body was charged with co-ordinating the annual estimates of the three fighting Services with a view to allotting the available funds in accordance with the defensive value of each Service.

Mr. MacDonald replied that the estimates were examined by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in consultation with his colleagues in charge of the defence departments. The final decision on the main lines of policy rested with the Cabinet.

Naturally, the criterion alluded to in the question was at all times carefully borne in mind, he said.—British Wireless Service.

DEATH OF GENERAL SIR A. CURRIE.

Famous Canadian Soldier.

London, To-day.

The death occurred in Montreal yesterday of General Sir Arthur Currie, aged 83, who commanded the Canadian Corps during some of the severest battles on Western Front.

General Currie began his career as a schoolmaster and after the war became Principal and Vice-Chancellor of McGill University, Montreal.—British Wireless Service.

VATICAN'S HOPES

SOVIET ENVOY TO INTERVIEW MUSOLINI

ITALIAN FRIENDSHIP WITH SOVIET.

IL DUCE'S PLANS FOR A "COME-BACK"

Rome, To-day.

The Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs, M. Maxim Litvinoff, is due to land at Naples tomorrow. He will go straight to Rome and will stay at the Soviet Embassy. He will later attend a reception at the American Embassy.

Wireless messages from the ship indicate that M. Litvinoff is very reserved regarding the subjects to be discussed in Rome, but the members of the Soviet delegation to Washington say that he cannot but receive favourably any proposals for effective disarmament and improvement in the relations between the European Powers.—Reuter.

Rome, To-day. It is believed that the Vatican may endeavour to make an overture, during the visit of M. Litvinoff, in favour of religious freedom in Russia. The relations between the Vatican and the Soviet are most strained but many in Vatican circles believe that the moment is ripe for an improvement in view of Russia's present conciliatory attitude.

If religious freedom is granted, many are of the opinion that the destruction of the Greek Orthodox Church in Russia opens a great new field for conversions.

The overtures might be made direct or through the good offices of the Italian Government, but no official statement is yet obtainable.—Reuter.

The visit of the Soviet statesman to Italy is attributed to Il Duce's desire to stage a "comeback" for Soviet Russia into the comity of European nations, possibly with participation in a future conference of the Powers envisaged by Italian policy.

Other subjects likely to be discussed are the increasing tension between Soviet and Japan, over which Signor Mussolini is perturbed, and improved Russo-Italian trade relations, by which Russia would take more of Italy's textiles, possibly in exchange for petroleum. (Continued on Page 12).

Roosevelt Faces Growing

Congress Dissatisfaction

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL. (By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1933. Received December 1, 8.55 a.m.)

Washington, To-day. Observers feel that the United States Administration's bilateral tariff bargaining policy faces an additional political test in Congress in connection with the growing dissatisfaction with the monetary policy.

It is anticipated that if President Roosevelt requests an addition to his powers it would occasion a double barreled Congressional attack on the monetary and commercial policies.

Congress will be convened in January.—United Press, per B.C. Gold Bar Co.

The first of the two German trans-Atlantic flying boats which are to make commercial flying hi story by starting the German trans-Atlantic air service, after she had been swept into a floating bridge in the River Itchen, at Southampton. The machine was only slightly damaged. (S. & G.)

JAPAN'S BIG PURCHASES OF U.S. COTTON

"Not Used For War Material."

HIGH GRADE MATERIAL BOUGHT FOR CLOTHING

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL. (By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1933. Received December 1, 1.15 a.m.)

Washington, To-day. Mr. Oscar Johnson, A.A.A., cotton expert, on the basis of four months' exports of 3,500,000 bales of cotton, forecasts an export of 10,000,000 bales this season. This would be the second largest figure in history.

The United States Department of Agriculture yesterday announced that the early season exports to Japan set a new high record. Mr. Johnson said that the Japanese cotton purchases were almost entirely of the high grade used in the manufacture of clothing.

For this reason he discounted the suggestion that the cotton was bought for war purposes. Munitions employ low grades of cotton, he explained.—United Press, per S. C. Gold Bar Co.

NAZI RELIGIOUS TROUBLES.

Bishop Mueller Opposed.

CONFLICT WITH ORTHODOX CLERICS.

Berlin, To-day.

The contemplated installation, next Sunday, of Bishop Mueller, as Primate of the United German Evangelical Church, has been postponed owing to the resignation of all the members of the Church's Ecclesiastical Ministry after a conflict between the extreme Nazi "German Christians," led by Bishop Hossfelder, and the more orthodox clerics.—Reuter.

PETERSEN BEATEN

LEN HARVEY WINS BRITISH BOXING TITLE

New Champion Floored In First Minute.

CLOSE BUT DESERVING DECISION

London, To-day.

Participating in his first big fight since he was seriously injured in his title bout with Jack Doyle, Jack Petersen lost his British Heavyweight Boxing title last night when he was out-pointed by Len Harvey, former middleweight champion, over 15 rounds at the Albert Hall.

Harvey, displaying splendid ring-craft out-fought and out-generalised his heavier opponent. He allowed Petersen to do most of the leading and then slipped into close quarters where he dealt out heavy punishment to his opponent's body.

Harvey had several narrow escapes, being floored by a right to the chin in the first minute.

He was then forced to his knees by a left to the chin in the third round, while he was almost sent flying into the legs of the ringriders in the fourth round. After this, however, he was magnificent, snapping Petersen's strength with telling short-arm jolts in the clinches.

Harvey won a close, but deserving, decision, being awarded seven rounds to Petersen's six, with two declared even.—Reuter.

LINDBERGH'S LAND AT BATHURST.

Survey Of Atlantic Air Route.

London, To-day.

Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, who are returning to the United States by easy stages after completing their survey of the North Atlantic air route, for the Pan-American Airways arrived at Bathurst, British Guiana, yesterday, having flown from the Cape Verde Islands.

The Lindberghs arrived in Lisbon last month after completing a tour of Europe, and from there flew to Horta, in the Azores, on November 21, making the trip in 8 hours, 51 minutes.—British Wireless Service.

U.S. STEEL MAGNATE COMPLETES TASK.

Reorganises Finances Of Hugh Corporation.

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL. (By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1933. Received December 1, 8.55 a.m.)

New York, To-day. The United States Steel Corporation yesterday announced that Mr. Myron C. Taylor has retired from the Finance Committee. He will, however, continue to be Chairman of the Board of Directors and the Company's chief executive officer.

Wall Street interpreters report as indicating that Mr. Taylor has completed the re-organisation of the Company's financial structure and that he will now concentrate on other problems.—United Press, per S.C. Gold Bar Co.

Donald Payne, aged eight, living at 15 Lock Road, Kowloon, was bitten by a Chow dog, owned by Mr. R. B. Stott, in Tack Hing Street yesterday, and was taken to the Kowloon Hospital for treatment.

The WOMAN'S Page

"Transparent" Faces

Effect Of Mauve And Green Powder.

Women must have transparent faces this autumn—at least to the evening. This is a reaction from holiday looks, and women are eager to appear delicate creatures again. Great sales in mauve and green face powder indicate that this is so.

These powders do not look as strange as they sound, but impart a translucent, gleaming pallor to the face which can be most becoming in artificial light.

THE DISAPPEARING MACKINTOSH

Replaced By Smart Waterproof Coats.

The vogue for wearing a mackintosh is dying so fast among smart women that something had to be done and quickly. The result is an attractive tailored coat of waterproof silk marocain, with all the metal and wood accessories borrowed from the ordinary coat of the moment.

One black silk mac has an unusual drip-proof collar. It is a plain being leather strap, like a dog collar, and it fastens with a buckle on one side, close to the throat.

Tailored Woollen Dresses.

At least one tailored woollen dress is essential to every well-balanced wardrobe. If bought early in autumn, a woollen dress increases its usefulness. It is wearable without a coat during the first chill of autumn, and furnishes just enough extra warmth under a winter coat for very cold days.

The two-piece style has always been popular for wools, and looks large in fashion importance for autumn and winter in the tunic dress.

Plain wide belts of crepe satin are as thick as leather, so that they will not crease with wear. They are in all dark colours.

Don't Be Like This Man!

If inclined to sleep at your desk take a little dose of Pinkettes tonight, and you will wake up fresh and fit for the day's work tomorrow morning. A corrective of that sleepy feeling arising from liveriness, over-eating or other self-indulgence, Pinkettes are perfection.

The ideal laxative and liver regulator, Pinkettes correct constipation, and aid digestion, keep the system clean and the brain clear. Of all Chemists.

Curves and Plumes

The mesh of feathers is favored for this evening hostess gown worn by Mrs. W. E. Scott, who displays a creation in crimson crepe with many yards of uncurled ostrich plumes forming collar sleeves and train. Note the "hour-glass" effect at knees and waist.

THE EDWARDIAN SILHOUETTE.

Will Be Seen At All Important Functions.

At all the important evening functions this season London will see the Edwardian silhouette, lovely trained frocks of crepes, heavy satins, silks and velvets on a moulded form, gliding once more with slow, snake-like walk, and in colours of charm and mystery. Dead shades of raisin, wine and deep bottle-green, and perhaps relieved with a hint of valuable lace or sumptuous fur, occur to one.

EDWARDIAN LINES FOR EVENING

Employment Of Net And Lace.

SOME BEAUTIFUL EXAMPLES

The emphasis on Edwardian evening lines is very alluring. One designer is fashioning a flat wrap-over in a delicate black crepe lace gown made up over a black moire slip. This particular effect is charming, but still more charming is a square decollete outlined by light petunia wide moire ribbon which passes over the shoulders to widen them at the same time, then down the back as far as the waist.

Here a great bow is set aslant on the normal line, and one wide streamer falls to the hem, with the wrapover of black lace vaguely veiling it from time to time in movement.

A pale green slip defines the contrast for another black evening gown, but one of net with a denser mesh weaving a floral design through the surface. The line is flat in front and slightly swathed with a ruffling ruche of the plain net running down one side and around the armholes.

BIGGER BELTS FOR EVENING.

In Satin And Chiffon.

Every belts are growing large again. Enormous ones of chiffon lined lame, fasten in front, with tortoiseshell scrolls. This belt looks like an old-fashioned night-dress case in the hand, but is very new when pulled over the hips.

Take remains of a stewed chicken, cut meat off bones and cut into small pieces. Put bones into saucepan with cold water, add any left over gravy, let stew until all the goodness is out of the bones, strain, add 1 quart of milk to each quart of stock, 1 tablespoon of minced onion fried with a tablespoonful of salt pork, 2 cupfuls of parboiled potato cubes, 2 table-spoons of butter, add the chicken and thicken slightly.

Baked Creamed Spinach

1 lb. boiled spinach; 4 table-spoons butter; ½ cup milk; 2 eggs; pinch nutmeg; ½ cup grated cheese; 1 teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon pepper; ½ cup fine dry bread crumbs. Clean and wash the spinach thoroughly. Drain and cook gently until tender in its own juices, about 20 minutes. Drain again, chop finely, add the butter, milk, salt, pepper, half the grated cheese, nutmeg and the eggs well beaten. Turn into an oiled baking dish thickly dusted with bread-crumbs. Sprinkle the remaining cheese and breadcrumbs over the top, set the baking dish in a pan containing hot water and bake about 40 minutes in a moderate oven, 350 to 375 deg. F.

Autumn Pudding

3 dessertspoons jam; 2 oz. brown sugar; 4 oz. margarine; 2 eggs; ¼ lb. flour; 1 level tablespoon baking powder; milk; boiled custard. Beat the sugar and fat to a cream, then add egg separately, stirring it in quickly and beating it well. When both eggs are added, mix in the jam and stir in the flour, sifted with the baking powder. Add some milk if required. Mix all together lightly, turn the mixture into a buttered mould. Cover it with a piece of wax paper and steam for about one hour and a half. Unmould the pudding and serve it with a hot boiled custard.

Jellied Halibut

1½ lb. steamed flaked halibut; season with salt, cayenne and lemon; mix 1 teaspoon mustard; 1½ teaspoon sugar, add 1 teaspoon melted butter; yolk of 1 egg and 1½ cup hot vinegar. Cook slowly until thickened. Soak 4 sheets gelatine in cold water, then remove and pour a little boiling water to dissolve. Add 1 cup rich cream and put all together into the halibut. Mould in individual moulds and serve with cucumber sauce or with mayonnaise.

Baked Tomatoes and Cheese

6 large firm tomatoes; 1 cup bread-crumbs; ¼ lb. Dutch cheese; ½ teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon pepper; ½ teaspoon Worcester sauce. Scoop out the tomatoes. Season bread-crumbs. Cut cheese into thin flakes. Alternate layers of cheese and bread-crumbs until tomatoes are filled to the top. Put strips of bacon across each tomato. Put in a shallow pan in which there is just enough water to keep the tomato from sticking. Bake about 25 minutes in a moderate oven or until tomato shells are tender.

BRIDGE NOTES

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By ANNE VAUGHAN

Many good contract bridge players are timid about bidding no trump, while others jump into a no trump contract on the slightest provocation. Since the making of a no trump contract is so often blocked by unusual distribution, the unexpected location of honour tricks or an unconventional lead, the promoters of the game fixed the game requirement at a lower number than for either the majors or the minors. As the bidding proceeds partners should be on the alert to see the possibility of ending in no trump. Before making a decision, however, several things should be taken into consideration. Entry cards are of the greatest importance. The expected original lead may not materialize. Do you expect to take 10 tricks in either spades or no trump which ever you decide to bid; or are you expecting to make a game only in one or the other. If you can figure 10 tricks in either bid, then no trump is the better bid, but if the expectation is game only, then the major suit is preferable.

In a no trump contract both declarer and adversaries are straining every nerve to first establish a long suit. The adversary has the advantage of the first lead while the declarer has the exposed dummy. As a rule declarer is going after the longest suit of the combined hands. Here, however, as elsewhere, rules are modified by bids and leads. I have selected one of Mr. McKenney's hands to illustrate this point.

North.
Spades: 7, 3
Hearts: K, 8
Diamonds: A, J, 9, 5, 3
Clubs: Q, 10, 6, 3

West.
Spades: Q, J, 10, 6, 4
Hearts: Q, 9, 3
Diamonds: 7, 4
Clubs: A, 9, 2

South.
Spades: A, K, 9
Hearts: A, 10, 6, 2
Diamonds: Q, 10, 2
Clubs: K, J, 8

East.
Spades: 8, 5, 2
Hearts: J, 7, 5, 4
Diamonds: K, 8, 6
Clubs: 7, 5, 4

The contract should end in three no trump with South as declarer. West naturally leads the queen of spades and declarer must immediately plan the hand. The combined hands hold eight diamonds and seven clubs. Normally the diamonds would be developed first. However, with the original spade lead from West, the correct play is to develop the clubs first. The reason is this, if the club suit is not established before the diamonds are finessed and before declarer loses command of spades, it will be impossible to make the contract provided West holds the ace of clubs. The play then should be to take the first spade trick; force out the ace of clubs; duck the second spade trick, then finesse the diamonds. At this stage of the game it will be no serious loss of the finesse losses.

Real Sky-Going Movie Star

Not content with winning a place in the Hollywood movie firmament, Miss Jane Barnes, daughter of Representative Clarence A. Barnes, of Mansfield, Mass., seeks a high spot in the aviation world. After only ten secret flying lessons, Miss Barnes obtained a pilot's license and plans to fly to her Eastern home from Hollywood in her own plane.

The hand given below is rather interesting as the making of the contract absolutely depends on the first play by declarer. Declarer of this hand was not a Culbertson player and hence opened the bidding with a no trump in preference to a spade.

North.
Spades: J, 6, 4, 2
Hearts: 9, 6
Diamonds: 10, 6, 3
Clubs: A, Q, 8, 2

West.
Spades: Q, 9, 8, 3
Hearts: K, 10, 7
Diamonds: Q, 7, 2
Clubs: 8, 7, 5

South.
Spades: A, K, 10, 5
Hearts: A, Q, 4
Diamonds: A, J, 5, 4
Clubs: K, J

East.
Spades: 7
Hearts: J, 8, 5, 3, 2
Diamonds: K, 9, 8
Clubs: 10, 9, 6, 4

The contract ended in three no trump, and since spades had not been bid by South, West's original lead was the three of spades. When dummy is exposed declarer guesses the possibilities. He can see three spade tricks, four club tricks and one each in hearts and diamonds, possibly more. However, if he is careless in playing to the first trick the contract will be lost. If declarer takes the spade trick with the 10 of spades there is no chance of making the contract. The trick must be taken with the ace or king otherwise he is blocking himself and can never get into dummy's hand to make his club tricks after playing the king and jack in his own hand. If he takes the trick with the 10, unblocks his clubs, then leads the five of spades up to dummy, West will unquestionably cover and then the game is lost. It is just such simple things as this which make or break a contract.

ENGLISHMEN POPULAR WITH U.S. STUDENTS

Rank Second In College Ballot.

CANADIANS COME THIRD

Chicago.
American college students like Americans first, Englishmen second, then Canadians, Scotsmen, Irishmen, Germans, Frenchmen, Norwegians, Swedes and Belgians in the order named.

This is the rating by 1,000 students of native Christian parentage who were asked by Dr. Milton A. Saffir of the University of Chicago to express their preferences.

The object was to find out whether there is a generalised attitude toward races and nationalities, which remains more or less unchanged by the specific reasons which cause association. The students told which race they preferred to associate with, which they like best for fellow students, for neighbours, for marriage and for business.

The 1,000 were divided into five groups, each of which answered only one of these questions. When the replies were tabulated it was found that the Americans rated first in all five associations. The rating was equally uniform for the other nationalities in the first three—Americans, English and Canadians.

Beginning with the Scots, there was an occasional scrambling. For business the Germans were preferred to both Scots and Irish, who rated higher as neighbours, fellow students and general associates.

Germans were preferred as spouses over Irishmen, but not over Scotsmen. Swedes ranked ahead of Belgians for general association and as neighbours, but just below them for marriage, business and fellow students.

Turks drew a fair vote as partners in marriage but zero as fellow students and as business associates. Italians were well liked in business, ranking in that respect ahead of Austrians and Spaniards, who were preferred over Italians in the other respects.—Reuter.

CHINESE SMILES AT JUSTICE.

Aged Gambler Fined In Australia.

Sydney.
For the first time Tuck Lee, a 64-year-old Chinese, appeared before a court, and he seemed to enjoy the experience.

He grinned on entering the dock; grinned even broader when charged with having been found in a common gaming house—and smiled when fined 10/- or twenty-four hours.

"Me pay now," said Tuck, still smiling, and producing five florins from a pocket of his tattered coat.

He was prevailed upon to constrain himself until taken to the cashier.

His colleague, Ah See (fifty-two) however, could see nothing to grin about, and looked very glum as he walked out of court with smiling Tuck after being fined £20, or 40 days, on a charge of being the manager of a common gaming house.—Reuter.

Mrs. Blanche Wilcox Noyes, actress and aviatrix, announced that she plans a round-the-world flight next year just to prove that woman can do it.

WOMEN CAN FIGHT CRIME SITUATION

American Novelist's Belief.

ENGLISH SYSTEM CITED

New York.

Mary Roberts Rinehart, the novelist, believes that woman have before them the greatest crusade they have ever attempted—"throttling the crime situation."

"They have shown by their work in the repeal movement," she said, "what they can do when organised, so now let them go to work on crime. They can do it too. This is something they have not as yet even touched."

Mrs. Rinehart, whose novels, numbering more than forty, have included some detective books, added:

"Even a novel about crime is a propaganda novel, for inevitably the villain is caught and punished."

Outlining the plan of attack which she thinks women should use, Mrs. Rinehart said:—

"To begin with, local vigilance committees could be formed by women throughout the country. These could make investigations, first within their own police district, and if a flabby—I mean crooked—police force is found, they could agitate about it. This would lead to the whole community's removal of unworthy police magistrates and judges."

"And they should certainly divorce police from politics," she said.

"I think, too, that a great step would be taken if, upon the discovery that a felon was armed, that thug's sentence automatically be extended 10 years. This is the law in England, and I believe in some of our States."

"Among the remaining benefits women could bring about are seeing that sentences are imposed when deserved; insisting upon the removal of dishonest magistrates and judges, and other wise enforcing law and order, despite threats from gangsters."

"Modern methods of crime are so organised that one has no chance to defend himself, so only by organisation can it be killed."

"All women certainly have a right to be interested in crime and its abolishment. For it reflects directly upon the home and on woman's own sense of security."

"I have studied this tremendous subject for 25 years, by observation and by association with the police, and have become increasingly concerned with America's tolerance of it."

"You don't hear about it in other countries—I mean the racketeering and subtle schemes of gangsters. But its development in America within the last few years has been enormous."

"Hand the job over to the women, now that the men have had a chance, and once the women see their responsibility they will straighten out the situation."—Reuter.

BAILEY LOSES TOOTH IN GOAL CLEARANCE

PLAYING at the Valley yesterday both the Royal Engineers and the 20th Battery, Royal Artillery, retained their unbeaten record in the Garrison Small Units League when they shared two goals in a fiercely contested game.

The Engineers opened the scoring in the first half through HARDING who cut in to net with a ground shot.

The Gunners retaliated strongly, but brilliant goal-keeping by Bailey, who lost a tooth in one of the clearances, saved the Engineers' citadel.

In the second half the Gunners pressed strongly and were eventually rewarded when GREEN-FIELDS netted during a melee.

Royal Engineers:—Bailey; Tucker and Whitfield; Wells, Hollingsworth and Sloan; Whiting, Harding, Budden, Lester and Pegg.

20th Battery, R.A.:—Joyson; Price and Wroe; Diccombe, Greenfield and Stevens; Barracough, Birmingham, Hopkins, Matthews and Brock.

ODD GOAL WIN IN FLEET JUNIOR LEAGUE

A keenly contested game of soccer was seen at the Valley yesterday, when H.M.S. Eagle defeated H.M.S. Kent by 2 goals to 1 in the Third Division of the China Fleet League.

Both sides were fairly evenly balanced, although the men from the Eagle were faster off the mark and consequently made more use of the opportunities offered them.

BONE gave the Eagle the lead early in the first half and added another just before the interval, the Kent replying with one goal in the second half through CAST.

Kent:—Longley, Chaston and Luckley; Hardley, Schofield and Hoar; Hollingsworth, Knowles, East, Armstrong and Bird.

C.B.A. CLASH WITH NEWCOMERS

"Y" LADIES TO OFFER BIG CHALLENGE

CENTRE FORWARD REQUIRED FOR WELL BALANCED XI

INDICATIONS POINT TO THIRD WIN FOR CHAMPIONS

TEAMS UNDER REVIEW.

(By Referee.)

THE 1933-4 Caer Clark Ladies' Hockey Tournament, which has been won by the Hong Kong Ladies' for the last two seasons, will commence to-morrow when the Central British School, a team of schoolgirls under the leadership of Miss H. Knill, clash with the Central British Association at King's Park, commencing at 3 p.m.

IN all there are seven teams entered in the competition—the Hong Kong Ladies (holders), Club de Recreio "A" (runners-up), Club de Recreio "B", the "Y" Ladies, St. Andrew's, Central British Association, and the Central British School—and from all indications the champions are likely to win the trophy outright this season.

THE decision of the Hong Kong Ladies to enter only one team when they have excellent talent at their disposal for two elevens came as a surprise in the face of the fact that Miss E. O'Hagan is back from Home leave, and Miss E. Gray and Miss J. Smalley are expected back shortly. The entering of two teams by the Recreio, who were runners-up last year, is thus all the more praiseworthy.

Below I will discuss the prospects of the seven teams:

Hong Kong Ladies

Being especially strong at forward where they have the services of Mrs. Selby, Miss J. Churchill, Miss E. Bonnar, Miss J. Dalziel, Miss Jeffries, Mrs. Adams, Mrs. Goldman, and Miss Bell the Hong Kong Ladies will be weak in defence until the arrival back from Home leave of Miss J. Smalley and Miss Gray, the two best backs in the tournament.

Miss B. Pope is at present the outstanding player in defence, while Miss M. Bird has given many fine displays between the sticks. Now that Miss E. O'Hagan has arrived back the champions' problem at right-half has been solved. Miss Heibling will probably play at full-back and Miss B. Wallace, Mrs. Robertson, Miss A. Owen Hughes, Miss B. Franklin, Mrs. Lowe, and Miss B. Hance will be contenders for the two remaining positions in the defence.

"Y" LADIES

The "Y" Ladies are going to prove the most serious challengers to the champions. All they need is a fast centre forward who can combine and I would select them as the best balanced side in the competition.

Miss Kuelpas has not come up to expectations and Miss R. Blackmore's trial at centre-forward has proved more satisfactory than any other, though I should not like to see her partnership with Miss O. Dalziel on the right wing broken up—this is probably the strongest wing combination in the competition.

If Mrs. Reed (formerly Miss Maudie George) could be persuaded to play regularly all their difficulties would be solved.

The other wing would then be comprised of Mrs. Dennis and Miss O. Brown, who is probably the fastest winger in the competition.

In Miss J. Weller the "Y" have a fearless goalkeeper who is not afraid to use her feet instead of her stick. She is undoubtedly one of the "Y's" most promising "finds."

Miss A. Fowler, one of the hardest hitting backs in local ladies' hockey, and Mrs. Portallion will probably be the full-backs. Miss S. Dalziel, the "Y" skipper, is occupying the key position and will probably be supported by Miss E. Thompson and Miss P. McCaw on either flank.

Central British School

Miss H. Knill is to be heartily congratulated on her attempt to further the interests of ladies' hockey in the Colony by standing down from the champions' side to lead the Central British School team in their debut in the competition.

The schoolgirls have shown gratifying enthusiasm and have al-

RECREIO SELECT "A" TEAM

The following players were selected to represent the Club de Recreio Ladies' "A" team at a meeting held at the Club de Recreio last night:

Misses B. D'Almada; M. Baslo and C. Osmund; L. Xavier, M. Alves and L. Silva-Netto; M. Remedios, A. Alves, C. Silva, M. Roza and B. Remedios.

ST. ANDREW'S

Though they have lost the services of Miss P. Woolley, and Miss M. Bryson, St. Andrew's are going to prove stern challengers this year under the leadership of their brilliant centre-forward, Miss M. Woolley. I am glad to see Miss P. Gittins and Mrs. Rose are again back in the Saints line-up, and, curiously enough their return to the side coincided with the Saints' win over the Hong Kong Ladies.

C.B.A. LADIES BEAT RECREIO 2-0.

Miss Marie Smith Scores Both Goals.

AT King's Park yesterday, the Central British Association Ladies recorded an easy victory over a scratch Club de Recreio Ladies' eleven by two clear goals.

MISS MARIE SMITH was in great form and scored both goals in convincing manner.

The Club de Recreio Ladies were taking the opportunity of trying out several new players in preparation for their matches in the Caer Clark Cup competition.

C.B.A. Ladies:—Mrs. Weber; Mrs. Hudson and Miss P. Woolley; Miss A. Whitley; Mrs. M. Bryson and Miss A. Hirst; Mrs. Gray; Miss G. McNider; Miss Marie Smith; Mrs. Mullen and Miss E. Woolley.

Recreio Ladies:—Misses G. Roza; M. Xavier; C. Osmund; A. Noronha, L.

The Recreio Ladies' XI:—(Back Row) E. Xavier, C. Osmund, B. D'Almada, M. Alves, M. Baslo and Mrs. Olanzo. (Front Row) B. Remedios, O. Ribeiro, C. Silva, A. Alves and M. Remedios.

C.B.A. LUCKY TO DRAW WITH THE SAINTS

Doubtful Goal By Whitley Saves Game.

GUREVITCH MAKES FORTUNATE SAVE WITH CHEST

(BY STICKS)

THE Central British Association hockey eleven, who have carried all before them in their matches this season, were very fortunate to come away on level terms in their friendly match with St. Andrew's Club on the Marina ground yesterday evening when they shared two goals.

A doubtful goal in the last minute of the game saved them from defeat.

The Saints showed extraordinarily good form and completely dominated the game, except for occasional break-aways by the fast C.B.A. forwards.

The Saints had a very strong eleven, the side playing well up to their former standard. The defence, in particular, were outstanding, Guest, the captain, Hamson and White being prominent.

The C.B.A. were without the services of Johnson in the forward line, his place being taken by Carroll, while Bickford was also an absentee from the defence line.

Saints Score First
E. F. FINCHER scored for the Saints early in the first half to culminate clever combination by the forward line. Shortly after Bliss missed a golden opportunity when he shaved the goal-post with a powerful shot.

The C.B.A. forwards made several brilliant attacks in an effort to equalise. Carroll missed on opportunity by scoping a shot over the bar, and a little later Hirst fumbled a good chance after a creditable effort on the wing.

The Saints continued to attack and, forcing a corner, Guest sent in a fast rising shot which struck Gurevitch, the goalkeeper, on the chest to save what would normally have been a certainty.

In the last few minutes of the game, WHITLEY made full use of an opportunity to score from the edge of the D. The position of the ball at the time of the shot was extremely doubtful, but the C.B.A. were given the benefit of the doubt by the referee, Mr. Husan.

N. Whitley, Hirst and Halford were outstanding for the C.B.A. St. Andrew's:—E. H. Wong, F. A. Broadbridge and E. H. P. White, T. MacNider, A. E. P. Quest (Capt.) and A. B. Hamon, G. A. White, A. E. Bliss, N. A. E. Mackay, E. F. Fincher.

Medway Quarter Deck Win Over Stokers

ROBERTSON CONSPICUOUS IN WINNERS' DEFENCE

THE Quarter Deck beat the Stokers of H.M.S. Medway by 4 goals to 1 in a friendly soccer encounter at the Valley yesterday.

Robertson, the Medway's brilliant soccer and hockey half, was conspicuous in the Quarter Deck defence.

BRANTON and WILLIAMS respectively, opened the scoring for the Quarter Deck, both goals being scored after wing to wing passing bouts.

Changing over two goals in the lead, the Quarter Deck went further ahead, through FERRISS and WILLIAMS, the Stokers replying once through ALLIS.

Quarter Deck:—Parker, Pringle and Level; Jewett, Robertson and Williams; Ferriss, Williamson, Branton, Evans and Elley. Stokers:—Quilter; McGill and Galsgarn; Mason, Fowler and Whitley; Fletcher, Allis, Wickwar, Smith and Root.

and M. Well. C.B.A.:—G. Gurevitch, S. MacNider and A. P. White, F. W. R. Allen, C. Halford and N. Whitley, W. H. G. Hirst, T. S. D. Whitley, C. C. Francis, Bliss, N. A. E. Mackay, E. F. Fincher.

ARSENAL MAY SECURE BIGGER LEAD

SPURS HAVE STIFF TASK AT MAINE ROAD

PORT VALE RECORD SHOULD STAND

(BY RANGER)

THE Arsenal should retain their narrow lead in the premier English soccer league to-morrow when they entertain Liverpool at Highbury. Herbert Chapman's team may even secure a three points lead over their London rivals as the Spurs will have no easy task at Maine Road where Leeds and the Wednesday have been the only successful teams to date.

THE Arsenal have an unbeaten home record, but the sharing of spoils with Birmingham, Manchester City, and Portsmouth have proved that the Londoners are not invincible on their own ground. The Spurs have lost only one away game—against the Wolves by a solitary goal.

ARGYLLS RECORD 3RD SOCCER TRIUMPH

McQuade Scores Goals That Beat "B" Lincolns.

LOSERS SCORE FIRST

(By "JOCK")

ALTHOUGH scoring first "B" Company, Lincolns lost by the odd goal in three to the Argylls, in a friendly soccer game at Chatham Road yesterday afternoon.

The Argylls side included Yeoman, ex-interceptor, at centre half, while the Lincolns fielded Baldry, McGuinness and Cork of the Battalion eleven. Also Barnsby, the Army cricketer.

The Argylls won the toss, and 2 minutes from the start "B" company were awarded a penalty for hands against Grant. Cork took the "spot kick," but the ball crashed against the upright. From the rebound Baldry rattled it again against the crossbar, the ball eventually being cleared.

After this the Argylls set up heavy pressure and only good goal-keeping by Manson prevented the "Jocks" from opening their account.

The teams crossed over after a blank first half and it was much against the run of the play, when 5 minutes after half-time a break-away by Thorpe on the right wing resulted in BARNESBY beating Hunter with a first-timer to give the Lincolns the lead. The Argylls again dominated the play and a quarter of an hour later MCQUADE scored a brilliant goal, hooking the ball over Manson, to equalise the scores.

Five minutes later, after Reid had missed an open goal, MCQUADE scored what proved to be the winning goal after a melee in the goalmouth.

Yeomans played a wonderful game at centre half for the Argylls, and, together with Boydland and Docherty, gave Baldry and McGuinness no chance to shine. Hunter was rarely troubled in goal. McQuade and Kelly were the pick of the forwards, Reid having an off day.

For the Lincolns, Cork played very well at centre half, but lacked support. Manson, in goal, certainly kept the score down.

Pie. Abbott lined up the following: Lincolns:—Manson; Bradburn, Currie; Bacon, Cork, Burnard, Baldry; McGuinness, Setters, Barnsby and Thorpe.

Argylls:—Hunter; Grant, Docherty; Gibson, Yeoman, Boydland; Reid, McNeil, Boyd, McQuade and Kelly. The Argylls soccer team have played six friendly matches to date with the following results:—

beat "D" Coy Lincolns 3-1 beat "A" Coy Lincolns 1-3 beat Kowloon 4-3
lost to H.Q. Lincolns 0-4
drew with Club 2-2 beat "B" Lincolns 2-1

Veteran Beat The Witch.

FLINT SCORES DECIDER IN LAST FIVE MINUTES

PLAYING in the 8th Destroyer Flotilla Football League at the Valley yesterday, H.M.S. Veteran, League leaders, retained their lead when they defeated H.M.S. Witch by 2 goals to 1.

GRIFITHS opened the scoring for the Witch in the first half, but the Veteran, equalised through MEEN and FLINT gave them their win in the last five minutes with Everton, the Cup holders, are at home to the Pensioners, and though beaten on their own ground by Huddersfield, the Wednesday, and the Wolves, they should add two further points to their tally.

Pompey, with three wins in eight away games, visit Blackburn, another club with an unbeaten home record, and are expected to drop both points. The Rovers have scored 29 goals as against their opponents' 11 and have dropped their only point to the Arsenal.

Port Vale, the only club among 108 with a 100 per cent home record, will be defending their proud title against Manchester United. They are expected to win.

Strengthened by the inclusion of Miss Doris Hunt, holder of the Ladies' Harbour Swim record and formerly of the "V" Ladies, Miss P. Woolley and Miss M. Bryson, of the Saints, the Central British Association are viewing the season with quiet confidence. They are being coached by C. C. Francis, skipper of the C.B.A.'s Mamak League team and are proving apt pupils.

Mrs. Weber, formerly of the champions' team, will probably displace Miss K. Fisher in goal and have Mrs. Hudson and Miss P. Woolley as her two backs. Miss Bryson, who has displayed amazing stamina this season, will probably be supported by Miss P. Whitley and Miss A. Hirst, both experienced players, in the half-back line.

In Miss Marie Smith, a product of D.G.S. hockey, the C.B.A. have a very promising centre forward. She should receive admirable support from Miss D. Hunt, Miss G. Maguire, Mrs. Misses, Mrs. O'neary, and Miss E. Woolley, all of whom are making rapid strides this season.

SUBMARINES WATER POLO WIN
The Submarines proved far too good for H.M.S. Eagle in a water polo game in the Y.M.C.A. bath yesterday evening, winning by 6 goals to 2.

Laker (4) and Ford (2) netted for the Submarines, while Webster and Revell replied for the Eagle.

CAER CLARK CUP HOCKEY

The Saints have been unfortunate to lose the services of Miss M. White at centre-half, but their defence is likely to prove one of the best in the competition with Mrs. Rose, a brilliant custodian, and Miss G. White and Miss E. Landolt, a very fine pair of full backs.

At half back Mr. J. Wong will probably fill the pivot position with Miss I. Woolley and Miss M. Church on her flanks. The forward line, however, is not so impressive. Miss P. Gittins is not a shadow of herself as the result of lack of practice following a brief illness, and Miss I. Gittins, Miss I. Rogers, and Miss F. Wong have not so far given any indication that they will feed Miss Woolley with the passes which are essential to goal-scoring. It is indeed a great pity, as Miss Woolley is undoubtedly the finest centre forward we have.

CLUB DE RECREIO

Runners-up last year the Recreio caused a surprise when they displaced St. Andrew's from their 1931-2 position, but that surprise is nothing as compared with their enterprising move of fielding two teams this season. With 36 players, many of whom are only newcomers to the game, at their disposal they have decided to give promising players an opportunity of learning the finer points of the game by experience in "big" matches—a risky policy but one that can only be tried and proved right or wrong.

The Recreio senior eleven are being led this season by Miss M. Basto, who is fortunate to have all last year's team at her disposal. Miss B. D'Almada will once again be between the sticks with Miss Basto and Miss C. Osmond, a very capable pair of hard-hitting backs with a sound understanding of one another's play, in front of her.

Miss M. Alves, who possesses a very sound knowledge of the game, will be playing in the centre-half position.

The one fault I found with the Recreio wing half-backs last season was their tendency to be in front of, instead of behind, their opposing wing forward during a throw-in. Miss L. Xavier and Miss L. Silva-Netto are the two players in question.

Miss A. Alves, one of the cleverest forwards in local ladies' hockey, will again be leading the attack with Miss B. and Miss M. Remedios, two very fast wing forwards, and Miss O. Ribeiro and Miss C. Silva, two hard-working inside forwards, in support. It is a very formidable front line, and, providing they receive good support from their half-back trio, should do extraordinarily well.

The Recreio senior eleven open their programme of Cup matches a week to-morrow when they engage their experimental junior eleven.

Not a great deal is known regarding the Recreio junior eleven as the Portuguese Club are in the unfortunate position of having no hockey ground on which to practice, and no real impression of the value of the new talent can be gauged as the result of practice matches on the football ground at King's Park.

I understand, however, that the team is composed of schoolgirls among whom the outstanding ones are the Misses E. Rozario, M. Xavier, Y. Britto, M. Roza, L. Silva-Netto, and C. Botelho.

LITERARY NOTES

LIVELY BOOK OF
POST-WAR YEARSWorld Competition Won
By Hungarian.

ABUNDANT HUMOUR

"Escape to Life," by Ferenc Kormendi (Chapman and Hall, 7s. 6d.), is the winning novel in an international competition. Hungary is the country of its birth, and here again the post-war years, grey with poverty, anaemic with disillusion, sordid with furtive and shady tricks, make the setting.

The plot is a good and original one. You have one of those pathetic and useless "clubs" of men who have little interest in one another, but meet because they were all at school together and still consider themselves "the boys." They are all tragic failures, trying to warm themselves with a communal heartiness.

In an English paper one of them finds a portrait of a man, now, the caption makes clear, doing very well in South Africa, who had been a boy at school with the rest.

A note of greeting is sent from the "club"; and the novel then revolves round the tragedy-comedy of how all these down-and-out, who had completely forgotten the successful Kader till they saw the picture, swarmed round him, protested their friendship, and tried to suck something out of him when at last he came on a visit to Budapest.

The characterisation of the book is keen and lively; and as Herr Noth gives us in "Berlin Tenement" the post-war moral disintegration of the German poor, so here we are given the same phenomenon manifested among the young Viennese rich. The book has abundant humour, but of a bitter savour, and its action is widespread, ranging from Middle Europe to England, thence to South Africa and back to Middle Europe again.

LOVE ON THE GOLD
COAST.Novel Of Humanity
And Observation.

Fetish. By Kathleen Hewitt.

Edwin Matthews and Marrow.

An artist, who fled to West Africa to escape the mental torment of an unhealed love affair, is the central figure of Mrs. Hewitt's novel.

The escape was not a real one. Vanessa, his lost mistress, sails on the same boat to rejoin her husband, and once more Martin finds himself in the toils of her selfish personality. West Africa, with its narrow, conventional routine, and its failure to provide the distractions of civilisation, proves too much for Vanessa, and tragedy ends her story, while Martin finds himself at last a free man.

Mrs. Hewitt, who wrote "Mardi," knows the man's helplessness through and through, and this characterisation is brilliantly done. So are her pictures of ship life and of the tough, sordid and dreary existence which the white men lead on the Yellow Fever coast. Here is a novel of humanity and observation as well as picturesqueness.

NOVELIST HERO IN

A Man's Way. By Muriel Hine.

(The Bodley Head, 7s. 6d.)

The hero of "A Man's Way" is a successful novelist named Clive Martyn, whose wife, Pauline, prefers horses to her husband's books. The clash is not unusual in fiction, but here it is considerably over-weighted by the endless references to reviews, royalties, editions, and so on, while it will be difficult for the most naive reader to accept Pauline's husband as a creative writer whose evolution can be taken seriously.

But whereas Clive is persistently over-drawn, Pauline herself is inconsistent in her bright, happy ignorance, and the side characters—the young Oxonian, Toffee, in particular, are excellently sketched.

"First" World War As Shown By Camera
Poignant Pictures Of Four Years Of Horror

A REMARKABLE RECORD

(By Howard Spring.)

I have just seen a newly-published book called "The First World War."

The title seems to be a terribly significant one. Hitherto we have known the conflict which raged between 1914 and 1918 as the World War. Now we are to know it as the First World War.

This book is unlike any other war book that has ever been published. We have ranged from the ponderous unreadability of the official histories to the shrill individual hysteria of the private soldier. We have had novels, plays, reminiscences. Not till now have we had the war portrayed in pictures.

That is what we have in "The First World War." Throughout the four most fatal years the world has known the camera, at innumerable points and on innumerable occasions, blinked and captured for all time another moment from annihilation's night.

In the air, on the land and on the sea; among the Russian ponies picking their shaggy way through ice and snow and the war horses magnificently caparisoned in the streets of Berlin; in august chambers where kings deliberated and in dug-outs where peasants festered in fifth and hunger; amid the cheering, jeering women who hounded their men to war and the weeping women whose men did not come back; where men fought in the trampled flats of the Flanders mud or amid the Alpine snows or the sands of the desert or the wastes of the sea; in all these places the cameras were blinking; official cameras, newspaper men's cameras, the cameras of the fighting men.

Record for the Future

The First World War was the first war to be thus put on record for all time, so that succeeding generations might know what facts lay behind the shouting and the tumult, what residue of horror was concealed behind the statement that in four years ten million men were dead.

There was grave danger that much of this great record would be lost. It is scattered all over the world; and for three years the "Daily Express" has been hunting it down, sifting, winnowing selecting the relevant, and arranging all into a chronological sequence, so that from the firing of the fatal shot in Sarajevo the story rolls forwards, through mobilisation and conflict to peace here, revolution there, the downfall of dynasties, the overthrow of thrones, and the insurgence of the Dictators.

Mr. Laurence Stallings has put captions to this remarkable series of pictures. Nearly all of those captions are ironic; some are devastating.

The Way of an Eagle

What do you think of when you hear the proud word "Ace"? Flashing wings, the way of an eagle, the hum of power high above the earth—all sorts of glorious things: speed and youth and victory. In this book you will find a picture of a bloody, flattened mass, hardly distinguishable from the ground it defies. Mr. Stallings calls the picture briefly: "Ace."

"Divine Service," says Mr. Stallings in his quiet, mocking voice; and there you see a cathedral on which for centuries men have wrought to bring beauty and sanctuary from the world's close siege; and the cathedral is little more than dust and ashes past which the troops swing by on "Divine service."

"Keep the Home Fires Burning!" he cries cheerily in front of a hamlet going up in smoke; and, bending down to decide what label he shall attach to this boy lying stricken under the noon, with pain and surprise still on his baby face, he decides on "Babe in the Wood."

Like the Hound of Heaven, Mr. Stallings' ironic voice pursues you down the foul corridors of these pictured years. "What on earth is this?" you cry, aghast before a tangled heap of rotting corpses. Mr. Stallings is at once alongside you with his label "Tactical blunder."

You can imagine for yourself the four pictures he has called "This was a home," "This was a church," "This was a forest," "This was a man."

"This was a man." That is the

Defy Mayor's Ban on Nazis

theme he has to deal with again and again. His wit is heavily taxed to keep count of these ghastly heaps that manured a continent, "No more parades," "By-standers in East Prussia," "Journey's End," "Short days ago we lived," "And no birds sing."

What do catchwords mean? What does "Backs to the wall" mean, for example? "Why, this," explains Mr. Stallings. And he gives us a wall, or what he might have called "This was a wall," and with their backs to it some men ("These were men"); and, letting it speak for itself, he prints Haig's famous despatch across the page.

So the tale goes on, and the cumulative effect is devastating. You notice the big, whiskered men of the early pictures, smiling, confident, martial.

You see the youth of the world sucked gradually into the maelstrom, till you come to that picture that grips the heart: "Men of war." A squad of raw recruits, just arrived at the front, pathetic children blinking at the veteran who regards them with a puzzled and doubtful air.

You note other changes, too; for example, how the radiant faces cheering for war, delirious with heaven knows what dreams of conquest and dominion, sober down, become grave, anxious, haggard, and culminate in a masterpiece that epitomises the post-war situation for millions of the poor. "Little man, what now?" asks the caption, and in the eyes of the man and woman who trudge the pavement there is no answer. There is nothing but the pathos of the last despair.

War's Significance
This, then, is a book whose pages you must turn before November 11 calls us again to remembrance. There are some who say the service should be discontinued because a generation has arisen that knows nothing of the war's significance. Here is the war's significance for all the world to see.

I do not know who could, look upon this record unmoved. I do not know how any, even among those who recall the moments of pride and exaltation that the war brought with it, can fail to contemplate this book with shame and remorse.

These pictured cartloads of crosses, these cemeteries reaching beyond the bounds of vision, these wagons piled with fragments of men, these Russian peasants sitting round a table on which the glittering crowns and sceptre of the Romanoffs are outspread, these marching Senegalese and Indians, Chinese and Moroccans, and little Eton boys with rifles and tall hats, these ruined trenches, and soaring steel shafts, these priests with mouths that blasphemously roar back their answers to the priests; amid all this surely you can pick your way to the war's significance; to the significance of the time when, by the superbest irony of history, the individual man could rise to unparalleled heights because man as a species had sunk to unfathomable depths.

Sociology And The Church.

In the October number of The Quarterly Review the Rev. Clement F. Rogers, who has been teaching Pastoral Theology for many years, makes a plea for a better understanding of social science by the clergy. He speaks with emphasis of the need of clearer ideas of "scientific sociology," but fortunately does not demand that every clergyman should devote years to its study. What he urges is that the church and church workers should get rid of many crude and amateurish ideas about the subject. "We are occupied mainly with the abnormal, which, as is always the case, strikes the eye, whereas it is the normal that matters most. We are, for the most part, unaware of the changes that have come over social conditions. We divide people into 'Rich' and 'Poor.' We talk about 'work in poor parishes.' But no hard and fast line can be drawn anywhere between the two. Mr. Charles Booth, in his 'Life and Labour in East London,' found it necessary to use these six different colours with which to classify degrees of poverty in his maps." Professor Rogers does not deny the necessity of dealing with abnormalities in social life, but lays the main stress upon the normal. Differing with many impatient writers of the day, he has a good word to say for the machine, as not only relieving men and women from arduous labour but making it possible for large numbers to work together in company, with a resultant "interchange of thought." Though there are great differences between men, and also between classes, they are not sharply separated into water-tight compartments. "One grade merges into another." The thing is for the clergy and for all engaged in social work to make their knowledge and their sympathies as broad as possible. They should not be misled into thinking that "genuine working-men" are such because they do work which is not natural or because they suffer from overcrowding. Too much preoccupation with such persons leads to giving an exaggerated "value" to their opinions and to overlooking the "intellectual demands of the great normal masses." To meet the latter there must be directness of approach, simplicity of speech and a genial humanity. Thus at the end we come out at the same door where we enter in all such matters—namely, that personality counts far more than institutions or doctrines.

Surplus Stocks

Over the heads of producers of raw materials in all parts of the world there have hung for several years excess stocks of goods, helping to depress prices. Many devices have been resorted to in efforts to reduce these surplus pluses or to prevent them from piling higher still. Brazil has burned coffee and destroyed acres of coffee trees. The American Government has persuaded Southern farmers to plow under growing cotton. Producers of sugar and wheat, rubber and copper, oil and tin, have sought by national or international agreement to limit output and to "liquidate" large stocks on hand. The latest economic survey by the League of Nations provides some reason for believing that at last the glut of goods, produced at prices too low to represent a profit for producers, yet too high to bring them within reach of many who stand in need, is beginning to diminish. Looking back over data which have recently come to hand, the authors of the survey believe it to be "a reasonable inference" that in 1932, "for the first time since the depression began, current production did not exceed industrial buying of raw materials." The figures which they present support this view. World stocks of coffee, in the latest month reported are approximately a third less than in the same month last year. There has been a slight increase in the visible supply of cotton. But stocks of wheat, sugar and rubber are slightly down, and substantial reductions have been made in those of tin and silk. Drastic restriction of output, particularly in the mineral industries, is partly responsible for the reversal of the previously established trend. Meantime, "as credit became cheaper and confidence revived in the Autumn of 1932," the manufacturing industries and the wholesale trade began to replenish supplies which had been permitted to run down. The survey notes as of special interest the fact that in such countries as Australia, New Zealand and Argentina, heavily dependent for their prosperity on prices of raw materials, the balances of commodity trade have gone far to right themselves. It concludes that "the recovery of purchasing power in these countries, where the depression began so early, is a good omen."

Bridge War

The Portland Club's ruling that the Four-Five No Trump convention should be illegal is a hint that the Club is tired of old conventions, and may go on to legislate against such as the Strong Two and the Vanderbilt Club.

At the Portland no conventions are played except the informative double of an original bid of one or two.

Even this is customary and not obligatory.

The Next Step

Further rulings of the same kind will, if possible, be given in the near future.

The difficulty is that the Portland, although in theory the ruling body of the game in England, must in practice work amicably with such clubs as White's and the St. James's where the more fundamental conventions hold good.

The new ruling, which may seem utterly uninteresting to those whose heart has never beaten faster at the sight of five honours, has a wider social significance.

It is an attempt to stop bridge becoming a professional's game.

The attitude is that the excessive development of conventions gives the virtually professional player an advantage over his opponents, beyond that which natural skill and card sense may afford.

TURKEY'S PROGRESS
IN TEN YEARSRE-BIRTH UNDER GENIUS OF MUSTAPHA KEMAL

(By Grace Ellison.)

Late in 1922 the Turkish Prime Minister arranged for me to go to Angora. Being the only European woman allowed behind the long line of bayonets which separates Angora from the rest of the world, I had many opportunities of studying Ghazi Mustapha Kemal, the creator of New Turkey.

In those days Mustapha Kemal was the generalissimo of the Turkish army, created by himself from a band of brigands in open rebellion against the Sultan, and president of the newly-opened Parliament, also created by himself. He was living in a modest house on the heights of Tehan Kaya.

Village That Became A Capital

Angora at that time was a fortified Asiatic village, renowned for its Seljuk and its Roman relics, and particularly the testament of Augustus carved on stone slabs which adorned some of the walls. As a village it was primitive and non-progressive as it was possible to imagine. A few dilapidated houses were thrown about here and there, according to the picturesque Turkish scheme.

There were no streets, no numbers to the houses. No one was in a hurry, no one seemed to be working except the peasants, and life slipped away by miles and centuries behind the progress of the Western world. "We," said Mustapha Kemal, "are in the Middle Ages."

Then the people lived essentially by tilling the land. High carts with large wooden wheels drawn by buffaloes squeaked over the roads, and the curious noise they made seemed the right accompaniment to the peasants' songs.

Trousered and veiled women for the most part tilled the land. It reminded me of what a witty pasha once said: "When four wives till the land for you, there is some sense in polygamy, but not when they buy their dresses in Paris."

The roads were not roads at all. They were all bumps and holes and stones, over which you jolted and danced, and at night were as sour as if you had been for a long gallop.

You travelled in primitive cabs, skillfully driven—see what perpetual practice they had on such roads!—by turbaned arabesques (coachmen), or in native yalls, long, springless carts provided with mattresses which, when you had drawn the curtain, could serve as bedrooms by night. These were harnessed with cord, often very much worn, and the horses were tied up with blue beads as a charm against the evil eye.

There were only two cars in Angora, both belonging to the Pasha, one of which he sometimes lent to me. It sprang up and down the banks and waded across the bridgeless river as though it had been built for that special function. Now in Angora they have elegant taxis.

In those days the only places where travellers could stay were the primitive hams or inns. There was absolutely no provision for women. When they were bold enough to travel they had to take what they could get, and, like myself, share a room which was already occupied by an American missionary and the two sons of a Turkish ambassador.

The Ministries were glorified barns, the staircases of which groaned under my weight. I was lodged in the most important Ministry. With difficulty a mattress was procured for me from somewhere, and through a hole in the wall my neighbours, two friendly horses, popped their heads and talked to me as I stroked their glossy coats.

Now Angora has first-class palatial hotels, with perfect sanitation, which in those days was conspicuous by its absence, and Ministries which are as elegant as the buildings one sees in capitals like Bucharest.

In those days the wise woman was the medical adviser in the harems, and healed with charms and magic. Marshy swamps, thick with mosquitoes, presented travellers, including myself, with attacks of malaria.

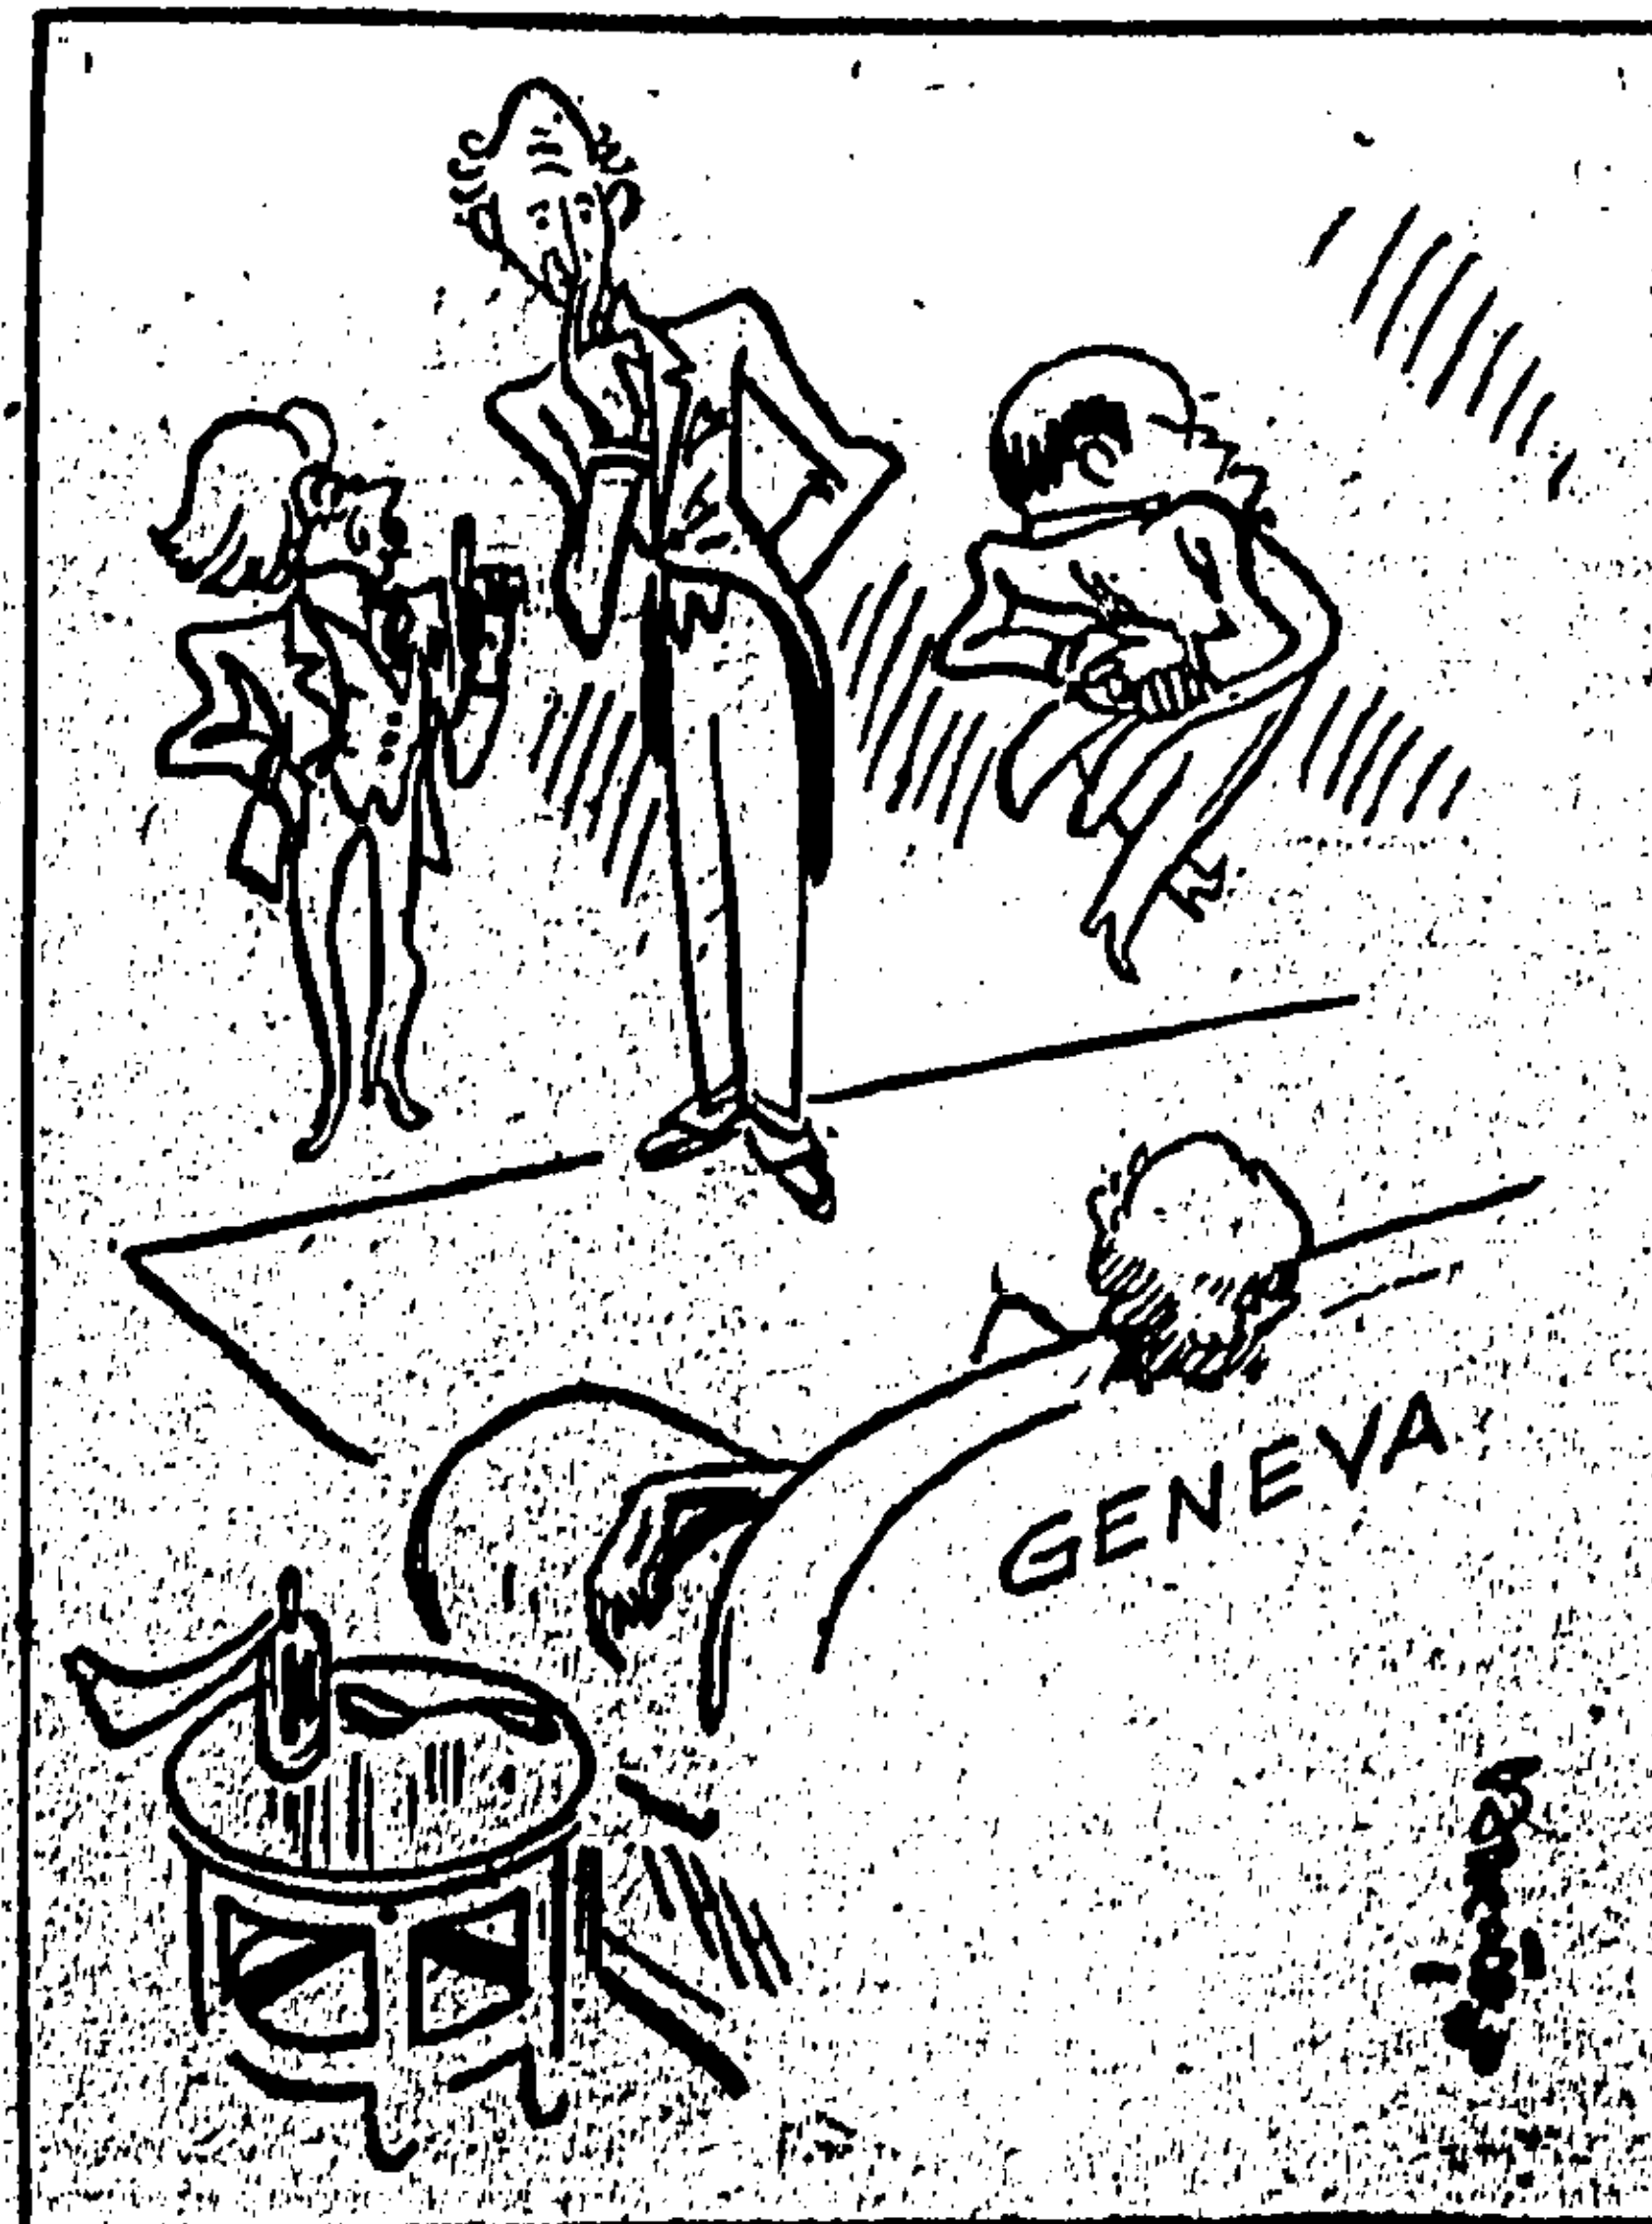

"Come back in five years," the Ghazi said to me, "and you will see a change!" In five years I went back and met him first of all at a Prime Minister's ball, which was the first ball given for Turkish women as well as Europeans.

Some of the women, it is true, were too shy to go without their veils, and when the Ghazi saw this he simply walked up and, without saying one word, took them off. "Well," he said to me, "and what do you say now?"

The whole of pre-war Turkey, except the language, which has now followed, was on the shelves of the museum!

And to me, who had followed the life of the Turkish woman from the days when I stayed as the guest of the Grand Vizier's daughter in his harem, the change was amazing.

Angora to-day, built according to plan by a German architect, is a white stucco Western capital, the turquoise blue decoration circling the white buildings being all that remains of the Orient of yesterday. (Continued on Page 11).

A DIFFICULT DIAGNOSIS.

POLICE SEARCH FOR COOK-BOY

Attack On European Lady Resident.

MRS. HUNTER PROGRESSING SATISFACTORILY

The Colony is being combed by the police for the Chinese cook, Ah Wing, age 16, who yesterday afternoon made a savage and apparently unprovoked attack on Mrs. H. J. Hunter, of 56a, Nathan Road.

Close watch is being kept on every means of exit from Hong Kong and Kowloon, and police authorities made a thorough search of Kowloon Wharf and Godowns and the vessels alongside the wharves, this morning.

The haunts of the culprit are also under observation.

$250 POLICE REWARD OFFERED

A Police reward of $250 was offered at noon to-day for information leading to the arrest of Tong Wing-koh, aged about 20, but 16, as previously stated, the assailant of Mrs. H. J. Hunter yesterday afternoon.

The wanted man is a native of Mun Tung Village, in the Yau Tung district of Kwangtung.

From enquiries at the Kowloon Hospital this morning it was learned that Mrs. Hunter passed a comfortable night and is progressing satisfactorily. Her injuries are not as serious as was at first feared.

Mrs. Hunter was shockingly slashed with a kitchen knife by the boy, who was employed by her. After the attack he bolted. The affair is rendered the more inexplicable by the fact that the boy is described as being an ideal servant who had never given a moment's trouble.

Mr. Hunter, who arrived home about 5.10, found the front hall covered with blood. There was a large pool of blood at the door way leading to the front room and bloodstains on one of the chairs.

Turning back, Mr. Hunter discovered his wife lying huddled up in a corner of the bathroom. She had a terrible cut on her cheek, numerous small cuts on her head and severe cuts on her left wrist.

Mr. Hunter rushed downstairs to the Empress Store to telephone a doctor, while a lady who happened to be in the store went off to inform the Water Police, who arrived a few minutes later and had the unfortunate lady conveyed to the Kowloon Hospital.

A bloodstained knife and a quantity of long hair, which had apparently come from Mrs. Hunter's head, were found in the kitchen.

A description of the missing boy, Ah Wing, has been circulated by the police, but at 2 p.m. to-day he had not been arrested.

YOUNG PRINCES' MURDER

Professor Wright is of the opinion that the ages of the children, 10 and 12 years respectively, is incompatible with their being alive at the time of the Battle of Bosworth, in August, 1485.

Therefore, King Henry the seventh is not connected with the murder.

Professor Wright discovered that Prince Edward suffered from a serious dental disease. A stain of blood across his face bones afforded evidence of a violent death.

Both boys were unusually tall. Prince Edward being 4 feet 9 inches while the Duke of York was 4 feet 6½ inches, but it is pointed out that their father was 6 feet 3 inches tall.

One of the brothers had an abnormal tear duct showing that he "cried his eyes out."—Reuter.

FISHERMAN SHOT IN HIS BOAT.

Attacked By Four Unknown Men.

A fisherman, Kwong Wun, aged 31, was attacked by four unknown Chinese at 11 o'clock this morning on his fishing boat near Adamastor Rock, north of Cheung Chau, and shot by one of them with a revolver. His assailants escaped in their boat in the direction of Tung Shu Wan. No property or money was stolen.

No further details are yet available.

YOUNG MARSHAL'S RETURN

May Be Expected In Near Future.

JAPANESE MAY RAISE OBJECTIONS

Shanghai, To-day. The effort of Mr. W. H. Donald, General Chang Hsueh-liang's British advisers, to pave the way for the Young General's return from abroad, appears to have been successful.

The report of General Chang's return to China in the near future has caused uneasiness in official circles, from which an intimation is given that an objection would likely be raised by the Japanese Government if his return is found to be unfavourable to Japanese interests.

Circles in close relations with General Chang Hsueh-liang stated the opinion that Japanese objections to his return were merely laughable. — Central News Agency.

CANTON'S ATTITUDE TOWARDS FUKIEN

No Instructions Yet From Nanking.

CONCILIATORY DELEGATION TO VISIT FOCHOW

Canton, To-day. The latest attitude of the Canton Government towards the Fukien revolt appears to be that while deprecating the secessionist movement of the Fukien leaders, they consider that armed conflict should be avoided.

A spokesman of the Canton Government said that, although reports of war preparations against Fukien are current in North China, the Canton Government had not received instructions from the Central Government to take similar steps.

He added that the Canton Government was still inclined to peace in dealing with the situation. An official delegation would be despatched to Fochow shortly for the purpose of persuading the Fukien leaders to reconsider their decision. — Central News Agency.

ANOTHER PEAK ROBBERY.

Mrs. D. Jenkins Loses Jade Pendant.

Mrs. Douglas Jenkins, wife of the Consul General for the United States, reports the loss of a jade pendant valued at $200 from her residence at the Peak Mansions.

The report states that Mrs. Jenkins put the pendant in an unlocked drawer in her bedroom on Tuesday night and on looking for it yesterday she found that it was missing.

There police are investigating the case, but no arrests have yet been made.

To-day's Short Story.

THE BROTHER

By Henri Barbusse.

THE village of Resat is cut in two by the valley of the Gueusine. Out of the twenty-four pinkish roofs scattered in this lean corner of Auvergne, a dozen pile themselves up on the grassy side of the ravine and the other dozen on the bald side. If any would venture to cross from one bank of the other, the odds are on his losing his footing and rolling from rock to rock down to the bed where the Gueusine extends itself.

It is human enough that the two groups of inhabitants, divided by the gulf as nations are by distance or by the hideous significance of frontiers, do not like each other.

But there are two especially who looked askance at each other across the ferocious cavity where the Gueusine is let loose—Jacquinot and Quinquin. Their houses exactly faced each other. One of the men had a face yellow and moist as mastic, and the other a beaming face, very brightly coloured, which discoloured the children.

It was related that a close friendship had united them formerly—one too good to last. One of them grew jealous; that was Jacquinot. From him proceeded the hatred. Quinquin hardly did more than follow suit, and hate in his turn, resignedly—or stupidly, if you like.

So an untiring enmity separated these two people. Their duel consisted in trying to grow richer than the other. That was enough. The success of either affected the other like a defeat.

Luck was equal at first. In the autumn of '92, Jacquinot bought the Estables meadow; but '93 had not yet shown itself when Quinquin reaped by the purchase of the Mansour slope. Several years later Jacquinot had not had time to enjoy his acquisition of a cow, a prolific milch cow, fair and white, when Quinquin became the possessor of an ass called Remi.

From that time things changed, because Quinquin changed. Former instincts of dreaminess and idleness stole into him. He began by attaching himself to this Remi, who had coarse grey hair, infinitely sensitive ears, and a look of probity.

The fonder he became of his obscure companion the less vigour he put into struggling, economising, scouring himself with work, and getting more money than Jacquinot. The latter, on the other hand, did not lay down his weapons for the satisfaction of his bellicose intent. His rigour and his avarice brought their harvest. When Marie Pesard's corner was sold by auction—it was splendid soil, having been dunged for fifty years—Jacquinot got it.

In spite of this rude shock, which might have awakened a dead man, a magic spell of indulgent inertia took possession of Quinquin. He smiled at passers-by like a drunkard, or at the ass Remi like a madman. He talked when he was all alone, or, worse still, he addressed himself to Remi, in order to make him wag his serious head.

From time to time he went out with no intention of working; and, once outside, he would gaze at the fields for no other reason than to see them! He went about the country to no purpose, and it pleased him to find that pollarded willows look like people, all with the same thing to gossip about; that big flights of pigeons, as they rise from the roofs, have the movement and the sound of a fan; with other such imaginings in the matter of the woods, and the leaves, and the little animals.

TO-MORROW'S STORY

To-morrow's story will be "Bachelors," by Hugh Walpole.

In that way, what was bound to happen came along, in the form of a bad debt, which went on and on, and got bigger and complicated. Dates came round with bills to meet, which he could not wipe out per contra; then suddenly—a last one, which could not be wiped out. On the advice of a lawyer, as persuasive as a priest, he had recourse to a little sale. Now, the parcel of land that Quinquin tore away was knocked down to Jacquinot.

What a victory! From across the Gueusine he had got right in among the enemy! It was really affecting to see, as you went by, the enclosure carefully surrounded by a very high fence in the middle of Quinquin's clover. The latter's little homestead seemed to have been mutilated.

Following that event, Quinquin lowered his head in the street. Then spring came to comfort him, and people heard him one morning singing like an incorrigible bird.

Then it was that he met Leontine—Leontine whom full daylight suits so well! She had hair as fair as the flame by which one keeps vigils; and her bright eyes were of richness incalculable. Quinquin was stupefied at first by the appearance of this passer-by, whom he used to look at and listen for equally when she came near and when she had gone away. Then the world became a beautiful palace specially built around her. One evening she stood still for a little while near to him, looking like a saint. Several evenings after, he dared to murmur a prayer before her. Then a slight blush blossomed on her silky cheek, and the miracle happened that she listened to him.

Yet June had not ended when she disappeared. He waited for her, in distraction, till the day when he saw her face shining and blooming on the other side of the river, on the threshold of Jacquinot's house. Jacquinot had taken his betrothed from him! The unlucky man tried to compete, to meet him again. But she avoided him; her father interposed and used brutal and humiliating language to him.

While he sought tremblingly to recover the savour of joy, or even only of peace, Jacquinot's luck increased, while his own still dwindled. His face wrinkled, and acquired so mournful an air that the little girls began to be afraid. People turned away from him. In return for his looks, there only remained twice of Remi, whose attachment increased patiently every day. The man liked to put his arms round the donkey's neck, and when the donkey took a step nearer him so that he could rub his head better on his chest, that was his only compensation here on earth.

Protracted, perishing rains in the autumn sufficed to ruin him. All he possessed had to be sold, and the chastisements of fate never come singly, he took cold, by the side of the empty fireplace, on the very day the matter was decided.

Note by Ringsider.

Petersen won his title from Reggie Meen, whom he knocked out in convincing manner after winning the cruiser-weight title from Harry Crossley on points last year. He defended it successfully against Jack Doyle, ex-Guardsman, the latter being disqualified and suspended for foul blows in the three rounds of hurricane hitting.

Secondly, that benefits should be dependent on contributions.

Thirdly, that the scheme should be placed on a solvent, self-supporting basis.

No change was made in the provisions whereby insured persons who had paid 30 contributions in the last two years were qualified for the minimum period of benefit for 26 weeks. That period of 26 weeks would, however, be extended in the case of contributors with a very good record.

When the present Government took office, the excessive expenditure on ordinary insurance account was at the rate of £60,000,000 yearly. At present, following the recent improvement in employment, the rate of income would now exceed the rate of expenditure by about £3,500,000 yearly on the live register of 2,500,000.

He proposed to use this balance by extending the period of benefit to persons with the best industrial record. For instance, if a man, during his previous five years, had paid all contributions (which were 260) and had drawn no benefit, then such a man would be entitled to 26 weeks in addition to the 26 weeks which he now got as a minimum.

Per contra, where the record was not so good, where a man had had some benefit and his contributions had not been fully paid, then he would get, according to the state of his balance, something less than 26 weeks.

There would be 167,000 more persons entitled to benefit and fewer persons would be subjected to the Means Test.

The Bill not only put the insurance scheme on a sound financial basis for the immediate future, but it also established the machinery to enable it to be kept solvent.

The second part of the Bill, said the Minister, was based on three main principles.

Firstly, that assistance should be proportionate to needs.

Secondly, that a worker who had been long unemployed might receive assistance other than, and in addition to, cash payments.

Thirdly, that the State should accept general responsibility for all industrial able-bodied, outside insurance.—British Wireless Service.

TURKEY'S PROGRESS IN TEN YEARS

Everywhere you see charming villas and imposing buildings. And well-dressed men and women are seen walking together in European clothes, or dancing, playing tennis, or taking their exams. In medicine and law side by side as though they had lived in this way all their lives.

What a driving force this creator of Turkey must have been not only to turn the country from an Eastern to a Western State, in so short a period of time, but to turn the delightful, exquisitely-mannered, lazy Turks of pre-war days into industrious workers!

Homes Instead Of Harems

Angora is a capital of which not only the Ghazi, but every Turk, is proud. They love Stamboul, of course, but Stamboul is the old Constantinople, a beautiful Byzantine heirloom, whereas Angora is their own creation, built and paid for with their own money, far from the European interference from which the Ghazi has freed them for ever.

All his life Kemal has worked for Turkey, beginning at the age of 10, when he circulated a paper among the schoolboys written by himself, and made speeches urging them to rebellion. Thus he was preparing himself for what he likes, perhaps, best of all: the making of speeches—a pastime in which he indulges frequently. One of his orations took a week to deliver.

To Mustafa Kemal, as to every self-respecting Turk, the harem was a source of great humiliation, and they smarted under the jokes of the stranger.

In the days of the Sultans the separation of the sexes was strictly observed. When my friend's father, the Grand Vizier, gave a dinner or a dance in the Selamlik (men's quarters) my friends looked on at the proceedings through a latticed window with weeping eyes.

Everywhere we had our reserved places, the women's quarters in the trams, in the boat, in the train, in the restaurants.

And in 1922, after the Greek debacle, when so many of the Turkish trains were destroyed and the Turks were very short of trains, the men travelled on top of the train and the women inside—not a very comfortable position, though it was according to the custom of the day.

A Passion For Speeches

It is true also that trains were driven by engines stoked by wood, and that they crawled to their destination. Now they have an Angora express which goes from one capital to the other in less than twelve hours.

In the old days Mustafa Kemal wore a kalpak. This now is strictly forbidden. He dresses in elegant Western clothes with the correct crease down the front of his trousers, and in the evening dress clothes with no decorations, for these he has abolished. He wears only the simple medal of the War of Independence.

He told me exactly how he had planned the remaking of Turkey.

"Make up your mind what you want to do and do it," he said. "Never be afraid, and never as a ruler let anyone accuse you of weak government. Choose the form of government best fitted for the people, and instruct them carefully how to govern."

To Mustafa Kemal, God is progress, the Devil is ignorance, and history is the tribunal before which anyone worth while must pass. "And what will history say of you?" asked some of his admirers.

"History will say," he answered, laughingly looking at his adoring henchmen, "that in spite of being hampered by a lot of rascals, poor Kemal did his best."

We spoke of women. "Your ideals about women," I said to him, "are the ideas of a Christian."

"Not at all," he replied, "they are based on common sense. You cannot have a true democracy, such as we intend to build up, with half the country in bondage. Besides, women have got to take their share in the terrific work of building up this country."

"Harem, villas, feasts, latticed windows, separation of the sexes, polygamy, and all the nonsense of a retrograde civilisation have got to go. Women are growing to be men's companions and equals, with equal opportunities in education and work, and the nation is going to be built on the solid foundation of a home and not a harem."

After freeing the women and ordering the men into kais it was necessary to change the laws of the general and women are judges.

Splendid Success Of St. Andrew's Ball American Admiral And Minister Attend

BRILLIANT DECORATIONS

The Peninsula Hotel presented a particularly brilliant scene when the guests assembled last night for the St. Andrew's Ball, the great social event of the year in Hong Kong.

The Decoration Committee, under the experienced leadership of Mr. George Duncan, M.B.E., who has now devoted himself to the work for 34 years in succession, surpassed their previous efforts in the transformation of the Rose Room and Roof Garden.

Immediately behind and above the dais erected at the end of the Rose Room, for the use of the official guests, was the crest of the Chieflain, Mr. A. L. Shields, draped in tartan and illuminated thistles. Around the walls of the room were hung various Scottish clan shields with illuminated thistles surrounding them.

In the reception hall were hung portraits of Burns and Scott, together with the clan shield of Macintyre, the clan of the Chieflain.

At the far end of the Roof Garden appeared the shield of Macdonald of Clanranald, the clan of the Vice-Chieflain, Mr. MacKichan, also set off with illuminated thistles. At the other end of the room the crest of the local Society of St. Andrew hung from the balcony, draped in tartan, while the walls were adorned with clan shields.

A striking feature of the decorations was the figure of the Patron Saint, St. Andrew, with his cross, mounted on the fountain in front of the hotel. The figure, which is nearly six feet in height, was brilliantly illuminated by means of spot-lights during the evening.

The orchestra was accommodated in the balcony of the Rose Room and the music relayed to the Roof Garden by a repeater system, carried out by the Hong Kong Telephone Company.

State Lancers

The State Lancers party consisted of Lady Peel, H. E. Admiral Sir F. C. Dreyer, K.C.B., C.B.E. and Lady Dreyer, H. E. Major General O. C. Borrett, C.B., C.M.G., C.B.E., D.S.O. and Commodore F. Elliott, D.S.O. and Mrs. Elliott, Mr. J. W. C. Bonnar, Dr. & Mrs. G. D. R. Black, the Hon. Mr. C. G. Gordon Mackie and Mrs. C. Gordon Mackie, Mr. & Mrs. A. S. MacKichan and Mr. & Mrs. A. L. Shields.

Chieflain's Dinner Party

Preceding the ball the Chieflain and Mrs. Shields entertained a distinguished company at dinner, the guests being:—

H.E. the Governor and Lady Peel, H.E. Admiral Sir Frederic C. Dreyer and Lady Dreyer, Admiral F. B. Upham, U.S.N., and Mrs. Upham, the Honourable Nelson T. Johnson, H. E. Major-General O. C. Borrett and Mrs. Borrett, Commodore F. Elliott and Mrs. Elliott, His Honour Mr. J. R. Wood and Mrs. Wood, Miss Varty, Dr. & Mrs. G. D. R. Black, the Hon. Mr. & Mrs. C. Gordon Mackie and Miss Mackie, Mr. & Mrs. T. H. R. Shaw, Mr. & Mrs. Stevenson and Miss Stevenson, Mr. & Mrs. K. E. Greig, Mr. V. M. Grayburn, Sir William Hornell, Mr. & Mrs. T. E. Pearce and Mr. D. W. Hargis and Mrs. Hargis, Mr. & Mrs. G. Bulmer Johnson, Mr. & Mrs. Allan Cameron, Mr. & Mrs. J. H. Taggart, Capt. R. F. Walter, Lt. Commdr. B. Tours, Lt. Commdr. Moore, U.S.N., Capt. Mears, Mr. J. G. Pilcher and Mr. E. M. Bryden.

Chieflain's Speech

Rising to propose the toast of the evening, the Chieflain said:—

land. That in itself was a gigantic reform. In turn there came evening classes for the illiterate, the abolition of the old Turkish Eastern script, and the teaching of a new language, which Kemal did himself by travelling round the country with a blackboard and chalk and teaching the people.

The Church and State were separated, though religion is not abolished, as some people pretend. And last, but not least, women are admitted to the universities, on equal footing with the men. Indeed, my Turkish friends tell me they are more advanced than we are, since they have a postmistress-general and women are judges.

"It is my great privilege to extend to you all a hearty welcome to this annual celebration when we meet to do honour to the Memory of our Patron Saint, to entertain our friends and to perpetuate our Scottish customs and traditions.

"Scotsmen the world over congregate on St. Andrew's Day, and so far as conditions permit, they celebrate on the same lines as we do to-night.

"Our alleged barbaric customs are often the subject of quip and jest, but our friends usually need little persuasion to join in the tribal rites.

"The support given to Ball this year is very gratifying to the Committee and myself. Times have been bad and money none too plentiful, and I hope this is a sign that the corner has been turned and better times are in sight.

"Before giving you the toast of the evening, I wish to thank you, Sir, and Lady Peel for honouring us with your presence. Your gracious support of the St. Andrew's Ball has always been highly appreciated by the Scottish Community. I also want to welcome Admiral Sir Frederic Dreyer and Lady Dreyer, General and Mrs. Borrett, and Commodore and Mrs. Elliott. This is their first St. Andrew's Ball in Hong Kong, and we greatly appreciate the enthusiastic manner in which they have joined in the dances and practices.

"We also have with us to-night, Admiral Upham, Commander-in-Chief of the United States Asiatic Fleet, and Mrs. Upham, also His Excellency The American Minister to China The Honourable Nelson T. Johnson, to whom we extend a cordial welcome.

"I wish to thank the Members of the Committee and the various Sub-Committees for all their hard work. I would also thank the Pipers for their invaluable assistance to-night and at the practice dances.

"This is the 34th year that George Duncan has taken the decorations in hand, and as usual he has given us something new and original in the figure of Saint Andrew at the entrance to the hotel. George has been thanked so often that he now refuses to attend the supper, but I hope Mr. Duncan will convey to him our appreciation and thanks.

"I will now ask you to rise and drink the Toast—The Pious and Immortal Memory of Saint Andrew."

OFFICIAL TABLE

Those seated at the official table at the ball were:—Mr. A. L. Shields and Lady Peel, H. E. Sir William Peel, K.C.M.G., K.C.B., and Mrs. A. L. Shields, Mr. & Mrs. A. S. THE BROTHER (Continued from Page 9.)

He went to bed shivering. After a heavy nightmare he opened his eyes. It was broad daylight, but there was no one near him. He thought of calling, but as no one could come he kept silent. Besides, helpless and choking, was he capable of shouting?

The deserted man rolled distress-ful eyes. And lo, the window, insecurely shut, opened, and a dark unhappily silhouette appeared!

It was Remi that had come, attracted merely by the presence of his master; Remi out of his reckoning, ignorant and artless, like the spirit of affection.

The man wanted, to say, "You will not forsake me!" but he stammered some formless sounds, as one's throat does in dreams; and he fancied he was stretching out his arms to Remi; and he thought from the bottom of his heart, with all his might, that this was his brother.

Remi, who was sipping in effusiveness, wagged his honest face and withdrew.

Quinquin died that night or the following morning.

Jacquinet bought his house—a final apothecary, rather spoiled, all the same, by the premature disappearance of the conqueror.

It was quite a big job to get Remi away. He seemed to have decided to stay planted there, and he stiffened himself obstinately on his feet. But they tugged him and beat him in such a way that he was obliged to trot where they wanted him to. By the road which descends along the Guesne, by the distant Bridge of Garages, and by the other road which comes back up the right bank, he arrived at Jacquinet's house. On the same day they harnessed him to go to market at Clamarande.

Leontine was laughing with the fame of having a carriage; Jacquinet was feeling pride and joy trembling in the skin of his face.

Husband and wife wedged themselves in with difficulty among the vegetables and baskets. Remi, being whipped, set off.

But behold! instead of following the road, he turned sharply to the left and shot across the field towards Quinquin's house—you could see it facing you, but it was on the other side of the ravine.

There Remi was returning, quite straight, quite plainly, in unconquerable hope. In the little carriage, swept away and jolting about,
Jacquinet scolded, and bellowed,
Leontine uttered piercing cries. But Remi cared neither for their shouts nor those of the peasants who came running with upraised arms, nor for the furiously-shaken reins.
With the perfect simplicity of one being who loves another, he was anxious to return to his house.
There could not have been anything beyond that in the perfection of so paltry a heart.

Jacquinet straightened himself to jump out, but Leontine fastened on him in terror and held him tight.
The carriage reached the edge of the precipice. It happened that the ass, straining, falling, threw his head towards his new mistress and they had the time to see in the big eye the shining angel of a soul.

ADDED INSULT TO INJURY.

Knocked Senseless By Own Golf Ball.

June, N.S.W.
When a golfer hits a nice ball and it strikes some obstruction, to finish up in the rough, perhaps the player can be excused if he expresses his feelings in a forcible way.
But a player was not even given this pleasure when his ball hit a rock and rebounded, to strike him in the throat. He was knocked temporarily unconscious, but after a brief spell recovered, and continued the round.—Reuter.

PETERSEN BEATEN

Petersen has since been rested, suffering from the effects of those telling blows. He had hoped to figure in a world championship bout against Primo Carnera in Rome early in the New Year, but his defeat yesterday has robbed him of the opportunity.
Harvey was beaten by Marcel Thil, the holder, on points in his attempt on the world middleweight championship at the White City Stadium last year. He won the British title from Jack McAvoy at Belle Vue last year, fighting his 288th bout. This year he toured America and when he arrived back in England at once sought fights on the Continent. It is much improved Harvey that has been seen this year.

FOOTBALL OFFENCE IN AUSTRALIA

Prosecuted For Playing In Torn Shorts.

POLICEMAN "OFFENDED"

Sydney, N.S.W.

For having played in a football match after his trousers had been torn, Reginald Wales, of Mitchelago, New South Wales was prosecuted for offensive behaviour.

The Magistrate, Mr. J. L. Sheridan, found the charge proved, but discharged Wales because of the trivial nature of the offence.

Sergeant Ruffles said that during a football game Wales' trousers were torn in two. He continued to play, and did not attempt to get another pair of trousers.

He said that the referee would not stop the game.
"I was offended at his action," added Ruffles.

Reginald Wales said he was playing with Bredbo against Queenbeyan, and about 12 minutes before half-time his trousers were torn.

He asked the referee to stop the game, but they had no other pants. He borrowed a handkerchief, and tied it around his leg above the knee.—Reuter.

The Acting Chief Justice, the Hon. Mr. J. R. Wood, accompanied by Mrs. Wood, left for Shanghai this morning by the Empress of Japan.

Meanwhile, the prospects for a new Anglo-Soviet trade treaty are believed to have improved, as the result of negotiations which have been proceeding with troublesome interruptions since April.

Agreement on several outstanding issues has been reached, and the biggest remaining obstacle relates to the Lena Gold Fields Company, which claims £13,000,000 compensation from the Soviet for a breach of the mining concession in Russia granted in 1925.

Official opinion in Britain is believed to favour sealing the claim to £3,000,000, while the Russians are willing to pay £1,000,000. If the wide margin between the two amounts can be reconciled to a common figure, the signature of a new treaty is not likely to be long delayed.—Reuter.
